Training of North Korean Civilian Youths

3. On 28 August, the North Korean government had resumed training programs for all government employees of military age, 3 who were exempted from the draft, to prevent their conscription by the Chinese Communist army. Korean Democratic Youth Alliance cells have established military basic training centers in the towns and villages, and members perform military drill daily. Approximately 60,000 men and 70,000 women were to receive a 3-month course by the end of October 1952.

Special Armed Self-Defense Unit Training in South Hamgyong Province

In July, the first class of members of the Special Armed Self-Defense Unit of South Hamgyong Province began training in the former Fifth People's Grade School at approximately 128-47, 40-31 (DV-819852). The course was scheduled for 12 days monthly between the twelfth and the twenty-third days of the month and was conducted by three North Korean army senior lieutenants and two lieutenants. From 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., instruction was given in basic military subjects including combat and the use of hand grenades, and from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., combat exercises were held. Graduates of the course were to be assigned to self-defense units throughout South Hamgyong Province as leaders or regular members. Three dugouts 2 meters deep were prepared 30 meters north of the school for use in training and as air raid shelters.

2.	Comment. Presumably a representative of the North Korean Labor Party is meant here.
3.	Comment. It is not clear from the text whether or not the training program involves only government employees. Presumably it is designed to include all youths who are likely to be conscripted by the Chinese Communist army.
